Approaches to Cultural Awareness Situations in HE

10.00 - 11.00

This session will examine the importance of cultural awareness in a Higher Education setting and how cultural competency impacts on the student experience. This session will cover topics such as cultural values and attitudes, cross-cultural communication styles, dealing with difficult situations, challenges with blended delivery, and adapting your approaches to International student engagement.

This session is suitable for staff in student facing roles who are either new to the college or feel would benefit from a refresher in key cultural awareness concepts. This is also an opportunity for colleagues to share good practice and be reminded of the college's key support services.

Talking Teaching: Building Community

11.00 - 12.30

In this Talking Teaching Session colleagues from across LCC will share their experiences and ideas for building student community.

Trudi Esperger will be talking about the Drawing Club she runs for UAL staff and students. Providing a social, online space for participants to engage with drawing and informal dialogue.

Mark Wright will explore the role of hope in pedagogy, as a critical requisite for community and learning. How do we, as lecturers and facilitators, ensure teaching and learning environments remain hopeful? Can hope be deployed as an operative tool or strategy rather than utopian ideal? What interventions might be required in providing pedagogies of hope?

Sarah MacDonald will look at how Academic Support has allowed voices to be heard and stories to be shared using two community building initiatives: a cross-cultural discussion group and creative writing sessions.

Anna Schlimm and Gabriel Wulff will share ideas for creating workshops at PG level to promote community and Angela Michanitz will talk about creating community across UG year groups.

Research Project Grants: Developing your Idea and Application

12.30 - 14.00

This session will open up some of main issues that applicants grapple with in developing and improving their applications for research project grants. We continue this discussion from a session held in March, which is available as a video-recording which is preparatory material for this session. This session will be an open forum for participants to share their reflections on the previous session and to discuss their particular questions and challenges with session organizers and other participants. In addition, Alison will share insights on what makes a funding application strong (or weak) based upon her experiences as a panel member for UKRI programs

Media School :Introduction to Social Media Analytics and Social Network Analysis

Session 1:

14.00 - 17.30

The first session (Day 1), Introduction to Social Media Analytics, will cover: what types of public discourse can be collected from social media automatically (via public APIs), the reliability of such data, and how it can be used to analyze online interactions. This session will also feature a primer on social network analysis (SNA), a method that uses network theory to analyze social structures.

Media School: Climate and Racial Justice Curriculum

10.00 - 12.00

Anna Fitzpatrick and Tim Stephens, as leaders of the Sustainability and Curriculum Design Units of the PG Cert/MA, have been invited to deliver a session on 'Climate, Racial, and Social Justice Curricula' to LCC Schools, involving the LCC student Changemakers, and new Climate Advocates. This awareness raising, practical starter-workshop ideally for groups of colleagues on the same courses, will promote a collaborative approach to climate and racial justice curriculum development. This will result in Course-based proposals for modifications and/or re-approval, or, significant 'resource' or 'teaching and learning' developments. The workshop will take us through four stages of criticality, self-care and well being, collaboration and community and evaluation and commitment. A follow-up short course will be available in the Autumn co-led by the Centre for Sustainable Fashion and Teaching, Learning and Employability Exchange.

Talking Teaching: What's Your Pedagogy?

12.00 - 13.00

If we are to take a 'pedological first' approach to blended learning do we need to know what pedagogies or combination of pedagogies might be best suited to make the blend work best?

Before this session please delve into this resource and explore it as much as you like and however you like. It will be the starting point of the discussions that will take place during this session. Some pedagogical, philosophies, theories and approaches for critical and creative teaching. <https://sway.office.com/xEEEjYt9GPCB4eJJ?ref=Link&loc=play>

This event will be a discursive and exploratory dive into a number of possible ways that might help your teaching and learning in the years to come. Michael Sankey, from Learning Futures, at Griffith University asks us to 'Put the pedagogic horse in front of the technology cart' by trying not to '...fit the pedagogical intent for what we are trying to teach, in after having chosen a tool to teach it with (because we like the tool), [but] instead, using the pedagogy as the reason for adopting a particular tool (as this tool helps me apply my pedagogy). <https://bit.ly/3cSN8Z1>

We will attempt to unravel some of these ways of thinking about learning and teaching in this eventful space of wondering.

A Taste of Creative Writing

14.00 - 15.00

Academic Support's Creative Writing sessions for students are aimed at stimulating the imagination, tackling writing blocks and building self-confidence – they're also a lot of fun. Using prompts and experiments to inspire writing, students have the option to share what they have written in a supportive atmosphere. Back by popular demand, this interactive workshop will give staff a chance to experience the student sessions. There's always a lot of laughter, and there might be a few surprises. Bring a notebook and pen or whatever you write best with.

Bring something to draw*, something to draw on, and something to draw with .

*Objects from your home, the space you are in, yourself, the view from your window... a sketchbook, scrap paper, packing paper, old envelopes...  pens, pencils, your kid's felt tips, crayons, ink. A variety of materials would be great, but you can join with whatever you have.

Born out of her own experiences of online drawing communities during lockdown, Trudi runs a weekly drawing club for staff and students across UAL with the following aims:

- To build confidence in drawing as a means to record and communicate ideas
- To engage learners from diverse backgrounds as part of the wider UAL community
- To allow learners to connect with students from other courses
- To promote wellbeing.

Introduction to British Sign language

(Communication and Travel Tips)

15.30 - 17.00

This workshop is for those who are interested in learning BSL, wish to recap sign vocabulary or improve communication skills.

The use of BSL skills has risen as face masks and coverings can have the effect of obscuring speech, making it harder for us to communicate with each other, especially for people who are deaf or hearing impaired. We will cover BSL basics such as

- Greetings
- Conversational skills
- Mode of travel
- London Tourist Attractions

Visual material will be sent out to those who wish to practice beforehand.

Please note this is an interactive workshop and all participants will be expected to have their camera on.

16th July

Effective Interviewing

9.30 - 15.15

Effective Interviewing is designed to support panel members, panel chairs and recruiting managers conduct fair and robust interviews. It is suitable for both experienced interviewers and those new to interviewing.

A core theme running through the workshop is the importance of attending to the candidate journey, and how to create a respectful and positive candidate experience for all, in support of delivering UAL's strategic aims.

The workshop builds on UAL's EDI module and comprises three 90-minute sessions:

Session 1: 9.30 - 11.00 My role as interviewer and the candidate experience; how does our individual and collective behaviour impact on the candidate experience?

Session 2: 11.30 - 13.00 Practical steps for fair and effective interviews; tools and techniques for conducting fair and effective interviews.

Session 3: 13.45 - 15.15 Putting Interviewing skills into action; practical session to explore and/or refresh the key skills of interviewing.

Participants must attend all 3 sessions - spaces limited to 12.

An Introduction to Carbon Literacy and the Climate Crisis

10.00 - 13.00

This session aims to give participants an introduction to carbon literacy as a tool for understanding and raising awareness of the climate crisis.

We will focus on the climate and energy issues of our carbon world and the importance of analysing our carbon footprints. We will also look at the benefits of personal and professional action and how we can build positive influence and create meaningful change. This session will also act as a useful starting point for those interested in carbon literacy certification training.
